

CONTRIBUTORS TO THIS ISSUE (1/2011)

Vincenc Kopeček is an assistant professor of political geography at the Department of Human Geography and Regional Development at University of Ostrava, Czech Republic. His research interests are focused on the political and cultural geography of the South Caucasus, transformation processes in the post-Soviet area. Email: vincenc.kopecek@osu.cz.

Tereza De Castro is a Ph.D. student at the Department of World Economy at the University of Economics in Prague, Czech Republic. She is interested in developing countries, international relations, international trade. Email: tereza.castro@vse.cz.

Jana Hasalová is a Ph. D. candidate at the Department of Human Geography and Regional Development, Faculty of Science at the University of Ostrava in Ostrava, Czech Republic. Her research interests are focused on the migration and development issues, especially the topic of social remittances and new countries of immigration. The author is the in long term undertaking field research in the Republic of Ireland. Email: jana.hasalova@gmail.com.

Lukáš Laš is a Ph. D. candidate at the Department of Human Geography and Regional Development, Faculty of Science, University of Ostrava, Czech Republic. He is interested in foreign policy challenges of Japan in geoeconomic transformation of East Asia. Email: lukas.las@osu.cz.

Martina Ponížilová is a Ph.D. candidate at the Department of Political Science and International Relations, Faculty of Philosophy at the University of West Bohemia in Pilsen, Czech Republic. Her research interests are focused on Foreign policy analysis, Small states and regional powers, Geostrategy and geopolitics and the Middle Eastern region. Author is currently writing a Ph. D. thesis about Jordan and Lebanon as small states and their relationship with Iran as a regional power. Email: mponizil@kap.zcu.cz.

Erzsébet Csatlós is a Ph.D. student at the Department of International Public Law and European Law at University of Szeged in Szeged, Hungary. He is interested in polar regions, law of the sea, environmental law. Email: csatlós.e@juris.u-szeged.hu.

Jarolím Antal is a PhD Student and Research Assistant at the Faculty of International Relations, University of Economics Prague, Czech Republic. His research is focused on the economic and geopolitical relations between the United States and the European Union, their potential and limits. Email: jarolim.antal@vse.cz.