

Contributors to this issue (2/2007)

Oldřich Bureš is a Senior Lecturer at the Department of International Relations and European Studies, Metropolitan University Prague (formerly University of Public Administration and International Relations in Prague). His research has been focused in the areas of Conflict Resolution and International Security, with special emphasis on United Nations peacekeeping operations, private military companies, and the EU counterterrorism policy. E-mail: obures@alumni.nd.edu

Nicole Gallina is a guest Lecturer at the Department of Politics and European Studies at Palacky University in Olomouc, Czech Republic and a Senior Lecturer on Eastern Europe in Switzerland. She specialises in state reform and political elites. Her recent book focuses on the Europeanisation of East Central European political elites, and will be published in 2008. E-mail: nicole.gallina@gmx.ch

Denys Kiryukhin is Research Fellow at the Department of Social Philosophy, Institute of Philosophy, Ukrainian National Academy of Sciences. His research interests include theory of justice, political ideologies, development of state institutes in the post-communist states. E-mail: denn_krn@mail.ru

Lenka Klimplová is a doctoral student of social policy and social work at Faculty of Social Studies at Masaryk University (Brno, Czech Republic) and is working on a research project concerning the new social risks in the labour market and employers' role in prevention and solving problems connected with these risks. More generally, the fields of her research are labour markets, employment policy and its measures, inclusion. E-mail: klimplov@fss.muni.cz

Tomáš Lebeda is a Senior Researcher at the Department of Value Orientations in Society, Institute of Sociology, Academy of Sciences of the Czech Republic. He teaches courses in Electoral Studies and Comparative Government at the Faculty of Social Science, Charles University, Prague. He specializes in the study of elections and electoral systems, and their effect on the formation of party systems. His research interest includes also strategic voting, voting preferences and election forecasting. E-mail: tomas.lebeda@soc.cas.cz

Dan Marek is Jean Monnet Lecturer in European Politics at the Department of Politics and European Studies, Palacky University, Czech Republic. His teaching and research interests include EU's Regional Policy, EU's institutional reforms, and EU's external relations. He is an author of numerous articles published in various professional journals (Journal of Common Market Studies, Journal of International Relations and Development, Publius, Regional and Federal Studies, Journal of International Relations etc.). E-mail: dmarek@tiscali.cz

Petr Novotný has graduated from the Miami University in Ohio, U.S.A. Recently, he has been finishing his M.A. programme at the Department of Political Science and European Studies. His research focuses on media and communication studies, and partly on political systems of Southeast Asia.

Lucia Pastirčíková is a doctoral student at the Department of Politics and European Studies at Palacky University, Olomouc, Czech Republic. Her research interests focus on the political system of Slovakia, namely the evolution and transformation of the party system, and parliamentary immunity in Slovakia. E-mail: pastircikova@gmx.net

David Rettura obtained a Ph.D. degree at La Sapienza University in Rome. His researches focus on Italian social and political history. E-mail: david.rettura@email.it

Svitlana Shcherbak is a Research Fellow at the Department of Social Philosophy, Institute of Philosophy, Ukrainian National Academy of Sciences. Her main research interests include methodology of social sciences, theme of everyday thinking, ideology and legitimating of power. E-mail: Ins@inbox.ru

Andreas Wimmel is Assistant Professor at the Department of Political Science at the Institute for Advanced Studies in Vienna, Austria. His main research interests include European integration and governance, political philosophy, democratic theory and discourse analysis from a comparative perspective. E-mail: andreas.wimmel@ihs.ac.at